THE PRESIDENTIAL SUCCESSION.

As Vice-President Arthur failed to leave the chair at the last session to permit the election of a President of the Senate, pro tempore, there is no such officer, and since the term of Speaker Randall expired with the session, the death of both President Garfield and Vice-President Arthur would leave the country without any constitutional successor to the Presidency. The framers of our organic and statute laws hardly contemplated such a contingency, but assumed that in providing three officers in the order of succession they had amply guarded against a vacancy.

The U. S. Revised Statutes provide, chap. 1, sections 146 to 151, that whenever the offices of President and Vice-President both become vacant the Secretary of State shall forthwith make notification to the executive of every State and publish it in at least one newspaper in each State, specifying that Electors for President and Vice-President shall be appointed or chosen in the several States thirty-four days preceding the first Wednesday in December, if there shall be the space of two months between the time of notification and the first Wednesday of December; but if there shall not be such space of two months, and the term for which the President and Vice-President were elected will not expire on the third day of March next ensuing, the Electors shall be chosen within thirty-four days of the first Wednesday in December next ensuing. If there shall not be such space of two months, and the term for which the President and Vice-President are chosen will expire on the third day of March next ensuing, then the notification shall not specify that Electors are to be chosen, because in that case the regular quadrennial election would fill the vacancies.

If both offices were to become vacant now, there could be no chief executive officer of the Government until after an election in the fall, and the declaration of its result by Congress.

HAS OUR SUPREME COURT A REPORTER?

They were asked that question last March, by the Executive Council. They have not yet answered it. Our Governor served his notice upon Mr. Spaulding that he was removed. He had been appointed in 1880, by Governor Davis, with the advice and consent of the Council, and commissioned to hold his office "for the term of four years, unless sooner removed by the Governor and Council for the time being." That is the exact language of his commission, signed by the Governor and Secretary of State, and bearing the seal of the State. His commission is not out: It has three years to run. Our Governor had hardly got warm in his seat before, he aimed his blow at the Court, through the Reporter, by attempting Col. Spaulding's removal, by nominating a successor. Without consulting with Major Hastings, he put him in nomination. The Council rejected him—not from any objection to Major Hastings, because they knew him qualified, but because, as they distinctly told the Governor, they should not consent to removals except for cause. In any case where charges were filed, or cause alleged, they would impartially hear and decide. They did so in one case, and consented to a removal of a Republican office-holder, before his term was out. No charges were made against Col. Spaulding. His attempted removal was entirely upon political grounds, and so stated by the Governor himself. He asked a Republican Council, chosen by a Republican Legislature, to assist him in the removal of a faithful Republican officer, whose term was only a quarter out, to give place to a Democrat. The Council refused to do it and rejected the nomination, whereupon the Governor, claiming the power of removal without the consent of the Council, notified Mr. Spaulding that he was then and thereby removed, and nominated his law-partner, Mr. Smith, of Bangor, to fill the vacancy thus claimed to have been created by the Governor's act alone. Was there a vacancy to be filled? Was the Court without a reporter? If a vacancy existed it was the duty of the Council to confirm any suitable nomination. If not, then they decline to help remove, and thus create a vacancy. At that juncture the Council stated their objections to the Governor, and asked him to join them in requesting the Court to decide the question for them. He declined. The Council submitted the question: It has not yet been answered. Col. Spaulding, in spite of the Governor's notice to quit, has continued to fill the office and discharge its duties. The Court has permitted him to do so for three months, covering the Law terms at Augusta and Bangor. His quarter's salary became due on the 1st instant. The Council voted a warrant on the Treasury for his pay. The Governor refused to sign the warrant, and there the matter stands to-day. The Governor says he has removed Mr. Spaulding, who says he isn't removed, and the Court treats him as their officer, thus disregarding the claim of removal, and he goes on serving the State without being able to get any pay, as the Governor snaps his fingers in the Court's face and says: You may recognize Mr. Spaulding as your officer, but I won't let him draw his salary. The Council sit awaiting the action of the Court and resisting the attempt of the Governor to make other removals for like cause. If the Governor is right, the Council are mere obstructionists; if wrong, then he is a usurper, boldly defying the Court and its authority.

GUNSHOT WOUNDS OF THE LIVER.

In the Medical and Surgical History of the Rebellion there are reported 173 cases of gunshot wounds of the liver. Of these 59 were uncomplicated with other serious injuries and 25 of them, or more than 42 per cent. were treated successfully. Of the 114 cases complicated by fractures or lesions of other important organs 37, or more than 32 per cent., were treated successfully. One of the cases of recovery reported was treated by Dr. Bliss who is now attending the President, but who was at the time in charge of the Armory Square Hospital in Washington.

Dr. Hamilton, the great authority on gunshot wounds, who was called to examine the President, is reported to have said on Tuesday:

"If the ball has actually penetrated the cavity of the belly, and passed through even a small portion of the liver, the future danger to the patient I consider very great, even though he may have escaped the first danger—that of hemorrhage. The examples of recovery after penetrating gunshot wounds of the liver are very few. In the late war I was able to record eight examples of recovery from gunshot wounds of the liver. I have myself personally seen two, both from pistol balls. The records of the late civil war furnished a number of examples. My impression is, about 15. It must be remembered that all the cases recorded by myself and probably most cases where there was recovery of such accidents, were cases where the ball passed entirely through the wall of the belly and made its escape externally. If a ball remains in the belly, as must be the fact in this case, if it has once entered it, the danger is greatly increased and can never cease entirely until the ball is found and successfully extracted. For every hour that shall hereafter elapse without a recurrence of great pain or high febrile excitement, indicating the accession of inflammation, we have additional ground for encouragement. With the President's temper, habits and good health the chances are greatly increased."

THE PRESIDENT AND MR. BLAINE.

THEIR LAST RIDE TOGETHER—THE PLEASANT CONVERSATION BY THE WAY—THE PRESIDENT PLEASED AT THE UNITY OF HIS CABINET—THE SECRETARY AT HIS BEDSIDE.

[Wash. Cor. N. Y. Tribune.]

WASHINGTON, July 2. Secretary Blaine to-day said he parted with President Garfield last evening and left him in an unusually happy and cheerful frame of mind. He spoke with almost boyish glee of the pleasure he anticipated from his coming and much needed rest. The conversation turning on his departure in the morning, he asked Mr. Blaine if he would not go down to the train and see him off. It will be remembered that Mr. Blaine was not to be one of the Presidential party. "Unless on promise faithfully," said the President jocularly, "I am afraid you will not come, for I think you are not good at early rising." Then he added more earnestly: "Do come, I should like to see you, as I may have some parting word for you."

To this Mr. Blaine replied: "I will certainly go. I will call at the White House and take you to the train in my carriage." The President thanked him heartily, and the two gentlemen parted for the night.

Mr. Blaine said that he called this morning according to promise. It was then arranged that the family and party should precede them in the President's carriage, and that Mr. Garfield and the Secretary should follow. This they did. Mr. Blaine described the conversation on the way as they rode slowly to the depot. Mr. Blaine said the President was unusually cheerful and disposed to talk very pleasantly. During the ride down the avenue, the President conversed freely regarding the condition of the Administration, expressing his belief that they were getting on singularly well; that notwithstanding all the reported discord among the members of the Cabinet, they were becoming better acquainted with each other, their relations of cordiality and mutual confidence and respect were improving, and that the Administration was becoming solid and strong.

"Yes, Mr. President," said the Secretary, "and you and I know further, that in all the consultations and interchanges of thought between the members of the Cabinet and yourself there has never been one severe or unkind utterance across the Cabinet table.

"Ah, that is a source of great comfort to me, Blaine," said the President, who seemed to have fallen into a musing mood. So they talked on, riding slowly, until the depot was reached. The President, who was seated next to the sidewalk, got out first and asked one of the policemen stationed at the depot (Mr. Kearney), "How long will it be until the limited express goes out?"

"About fifteen minutes," was the respectful reply. Turning to Mr. Blaine the President said, "Then I'll wait here with you."

"No," said the Secretary with good-humored positiveness, "we will go in." They walked into the depot arm-in-arm, and proceeded through the ladies' room. Just as they were passing from the ladies' room into the larger room adjoining, Mr. Blaine was startled by a report—a very loud report—of a pistol, and then immediately another. Scarcely had the second report rang out on the air when the President exclaimed, "Oh, my God!" Just then some one from the rear of the President rushed past and ahead of the President. Mr. Blaine, supposing him to be the person who had fired the shot, started in pursuit, but had proceeded only a few yards when he was recalled by President Garfield's groans, and, turning, saw him lying on the floor, the blood flowing from two ugly wounds in the arm and groin.

It all happened with such startling rapidity that, strange as it may seem, this was the first intimation that the President had been the target for the two shots. In his own mind, he attributed the President's exclamation to the fact that he was startled by the shooting, and he did not dream of his being hurt.

After the President had been conveyed to the White House, Mr. Blaine approached his bedside, and, relieving one of the attendants who was fanning him, performed that labor of love himself. Suddenly the President seemed to arouse from his stupor, and, looking up, smiled pleasantly. "How good you are!" he said gratefully. Then in a moment, Mr. Blaine, bowing his head toward him, the President placed his arms around his neck and said with an impulse of marked touching and as tender as a woman, "You know how well I love you. People whose motive was both mischievous and selfish have sought to prejudice me against you and MacVeagh and Windom, and perhaps others, and though I have been compelled from the nature of things to give them audience, it has never touched me here," pointing to his heart.

AT THE WHITE HOUSE.

[Wash. Cor. Boston Journal.]

THE PRESIDENT AND HIS FAMILY.

It is a noticeable fact that in all this terrible period the two persons who seemed to be the calmest and to have the most heroic courage are the President himself and his noble wife, and even the children of his family. Last night for a moment Secretary Blaine, the strongest in will power of all the members of the Cabinet, the one who has been put to the severest tests in this struggle, for a single instant at the President's bedside gave way to his feelings. The President kindly chided him and said, "My dear fellow, it is not time for that yet." That same wonderful fortitude has continued to be exhibited by the President throughout the day. It was manifested in a not less degree by his heroic wife. She was fairly driven from the bedside by the physicians, who insisted that she must take rest. She rested very comfortably for some hours, and rose this morning cheerful, calm and self-possessed. Toward noon she came into the room where the wives of the members of the Cabinet were sitting, and after one hopeful statement had been made to her by Prof. Hamilton and Dr. Agnew, said to the ladies, "They tell us that there is reason to hope; still we know that the situation is very critical." Mollie Garfield and the younger daughter were also cheerful. The boys never gave way to tears. The younger one assisted in making the hektograph copies of the bulletins, and it was touching to notice with what eager joy he hastened to give to the press copies of anything that seemed to furnish a basis for hope.

AT THE BEDSIDE.

In this southwest corner the wounded President lies, remote from noise or bustle, while in the southeast corner room his friends await in anxious suspense intelligence of his condition. There are rarely more than two or three persons at a time in the sick room. Mrs. Edison, the nurse who has so faithfully waited upon Mrs. Garfield, stays in the room, and Mrs. James, Mrs. Blaine and Mrs. Hunt have taken turns at sitting at the bedside of the President and fanning him. One of the doctors sits in the room, the doctors alternating in this service. The others sit in the adjoining room within call, in case any change of symptoms or want of the patient need their collective attention. No conversation is allowed in the sick room and the scene is hushed and still. There is little or nothing that Mrs. Garfield can do save to cheer her husband with her presence and trustful face. Although herself just recovering from a protracted illness, she bears with wonderful fortitude the intense strain. As Mrs. James entered the White House this evening she was met by the Journal correspondent. Her appearance showed that the protracted suspense was telling upon her.

MR. BLAINE'S HEALTH.

The Cincinnati Enquirer correspondent dropped in upon Secretary Blaine at his cosy home on Fifteenth street, Washington, one evening last week, and says the Secretary was in excellent spirits. The reports of his illness amuse him very much, and evidently worry the people. Said he: "I have had sent me a recipe for every ill that flesh is heir to, and one for paralysis. Do I look as if I needed medicine? Some time ago I did have an attack of rheumatism in my knees, and when I was in New York attending Whitelaw Reid's wedding, I consulted with Dr. Morton. He advised me to take the same treatment one would do to reduce obesity. This I did. I eat nothing with starch in it, nothing sweet; eat no desserts, and do not drink anything. This treatment reduced me some in flesh. I was over at the White House to-day. They have a pair of Fairbanks scales there. I got on and tipped the balance at one hundred and ninety pounds. Just feel that leg," said the Secretary, rising to his feet. This your correspondent did, and vouches for its almost iron solidity. Continuing, said the Secretary: "I am over my rheumatic pains now, and never felt better in my life." Your correspondent suggested the alarming reports of his illness were circulated because he was so hard to kill. "Well, what am I to do?" said he. "If I go over to the State Department, I am besieged with office-seekers. Now, mind you, these do not come for places in the foreign service. On the contrary, the majority of them want places in other departments. I had either to abandon these place hunters or neglect the duties of my department. So I fitted up a room in my own house, and I think you will find that the business of the State Department is not at all behind."

MRS. GARFIELD'S SAD HOME-COMING.

As the hour approached at which Mrs. Garfield was expected to arrive, a sorrowful group gathered on the south portico to receive her. At a few minutes before 7 o'clock three carriages were seen driving rapidly toward the White House through the grounds south of the mansion. As the foremost carriage drew up at the steps, Attorney-General MacVeagh and the wife of the Postmaster-General, with one of Mrs. Garfield's older sons, went down to the carriage to assist her to alight. Her son placed his arm around her waist and led her into the house, sobbing. Strong men who looked upon this sad home-coming turned away and wept as they heard the heart-broken sobs of the President's wife.

AT HER HUSBAND'S BEDSIDE.

Mrs. Garfield was immediately taken to the bedside of her dying husband, who greeted her with affectionate cheerfulness. The scene was not one to be described. The presence of Mrs. Garfield seemed to cheer the President and a favorable turn in his condition, which was observed within an hour after her arrival, was attributed by the physicians to that fact. The President's pulse, which had been for some time at 130, ran down to 123, and soon afterward to 112, and his temperature and respiration became nearly normal. At 9.40 he was reported to be sleeping quietly, and Mrs. Garfield felt considerably encouraged, although the physicians still shook their heads and maintained the opinion that the case was hopeless.

Much comment has been made in New York by the posting of extra policemen at the Fifth Avenue Hotel to protect ex-Senator Conkling from any possible assault.

THURSDAY, JULY 7, 1881.

BY TELEGRAPH.

President Garfield.

His Improvement Continues

HE HAS A GOOD APPETITE,

And His Food Assimilates Perfectly.

MRS. GARFIELD'S CONFIDENCE.

The Whole World's Sympathy.

The President's Best Day Yet.

Sultry Weather—The President Refreshed—Mrs Garfield Cheerful and Gaining Strength

WASHINGTON July 6 The morning broke hot and sultry, and to-day promises to be even hotter than yes erday

The President awoke this morning at half past four His pulse at that hour was 101 Both his temperature and pulse are practically unchanged Mrs Dr Susan P Lyon who is attending Mrs Garfield reports her as cheerful and gaining strength

When Col Rockwell entered the President's room shortly after 7 this morning he found everybody wearing a cheerful look How do you feel this morning? said he to the President and in response received the following answer

Very much refreshed I slept well all night I feel better than at any time since Saturday morning

His voice was strong and his manner very cheerful

Mrs Garfield With Her Husband—Her Hopefulness

Mrs Garfield was with her husband a few minutes this morning and they conversed quietly together She came away with apparently increased confidence and subsequently she expressed a wish for the preservation of certain newspaper articles the assassination remarking that she wanted the General to see them when he got well Secretary and Mrs Lincoln arrived just before the attack, and Mrs Garfield received them with a beaming countenance

EXECUTIVE MANSION July 6—5 A M—Mrs Lyon on one of the attendants in the sick room says the President rested well during the most of the night

6 30 A M—Col Rockwell one of the watchers during the latter part of the night reports the President to have passed a quiet night The President remarked this morning that he felt considerably refreshed after rest that he had obtained during the night

EXECUTIVE MANSION, July 6—A M—Dr Bliss and Wood very much express themselves as feeling very much encouraged at the President's condition this morning His pulse at this hour, 6 A M is at 100

9 A M—The President passed a most comfortable night and slept well His condition has remained throughout as favorable as when the last bulletin was issued His pulse is becoming less frequent and is now 96 temperature 98-9, respiration 20 (Signed)

D W BLISS
J K LARNED
J J WOODWARD
ROBERT REYBURN

10 A M—The condition of the President is the last official bulletin 8 30 A M is further improved His pulse is 96 and temperature normal

The physicians announced that the next bulletin will be issued at noon

11 A M—Secretary Blaine has just sent the following telegram

Lowell Minister to London

The President passed a very comfortable night and for the first time since he was wounded his pulse is below 100 His physicians feel fresh encouragement but are solicitously anxious for the trying days yet to come

12 30 P M—The President remains quite comfortable as at the last bulletin He takes his nourishment well His pulse is 100 temperature 99 7 respiration 20

(Signed) D W BLISS, M D
J K BARNES
J J WOODWARD
ROBERT REYBURN

1 P M—There has been a slight rise in the pulse of the President since 8 30 A M only by changing the bed and the movement of the patient's body which it necessitated His symptoms are still regarded as very favorable

Unless some unfavorable change should occur no further official bulletins will be issued until 8 30 P M Experiments are now being made with different sorts of reclining apparatus in order to relieve the patient if possible from the unfavorable influence of the great heat by artificially cooling the atmosphere

Report to Consulting Physicians

Executive Mansion, July 6 The following despatch was sent by the surgeons in charge to the two consulting surgeons this afternoon

Except two Mums on July 6—1 P M—Since our telegram of yesterday, the case has progressed favorably The President rested quite comfortably during the day and needed no morphia until bed time last night his mind was perfectly clear and he obeyed our injunctions to refrain from conversation The afternoon prostration of symptoms heretofore observed daily, did not occur, the only perceptible disturbance in his pulse took place July 5 8 30 P M it was 106 temperature 100-6, respiration 24 During the afternoon he had several small solid natural evacuations from the bowels the first since the accident They occured without pain or discomfort, and contained no trace of blood During the early evening, from 7 to 10 P M, he was troubled occasionally with expectations, but on suspending the administration of nourishment for a short time this symptom disappeared At 10 30 P M one quarter of a grain of morphia was administered It was hypodermically administered, being the only amount given since our telegram to you yesterday He has passed very well during the night and has also himself manifesting quite comfortable though weak This morning at 8 30 A M his pulse was 98, respiration 23 temperature 98 5 The tenderness of the lower extremities has considerably diminished He is taking with relish, every two hours, a small chicken broth made more nutritious by the addition of raw egg albumen At 1 30 P M to-day his pulse was 100, temperature 99 7, respiration 23 We will continue to keep you advised of the progress of the case

(Signed) D W BLISS
J K BARNES
J J WOODWARD
ROBERT REYBURN

2 30 P M—The President's condition remains unchanged, all rumors to the contrary notwithstanding

3 30 P M—Among other favorable symptoms in President's condition to-day is the fact that he is beginning to find fault with his physicians because they do not give him enough to eat He called this afternoon for a beef steak, but upon being told that it was not thought prudent, at present, to allow him to eat such hearty food, he grumbled a little, but consented to compromise upon an egg, and say no more about it The egg was given him He wished also to know this afternoon whether he could not be permitted to hold a cabinet meeting, and evinced generally a disposition to talk, which his physicians were obliged to discourage and restrain His symptoms at this hour, 3 30 P M, continue to be favorable

5 30 P M Dr Bliss says that the President's condition and symptoms at this hour are favorable and satisfactory.

EXECUTIVE MANSION, July 6—8 30 P M. The President's condition continues as favorable as at last reports He has passed a very comfortable day, taking more nourishment than yesterday. Pulse 104 temperature 100-6, respiration 23 Unless unfavorable symptoms develop no further bulletins will be issued until to-morrow morning.

Midnight Bulletin

EXECUTIVE MANSION, July 6—Midnight. The President has passed a most comfortable day, and his condition to-night is as satisfactory as could be expected He has taken more nourishment during the past 18 hours than at any time since he was wounded, and the flood has all been retarded and perfectly assimilated. In order to relieve him as far as possible from depression caused by intense heat, attending physicians this evening put into operation a simple refrigerating apparatus which it is thought will render the atmosphere of his room to-morrow much more comfortable than it has been to-day.

Although only a few hours have elapsed since this apparatus was put into operation it has made a very perceptible change, and it is thought that its utility will be still more clearly demonstrated to-morrow The day has been a comparatively quiet one at the Executive Mansion for the reason that the favorable bulletins have to a great extent relieved the public anxiety, and decreased the number of callers At this hour, midnight the President is resting quietly and all his symptoms are encouraging

Executive Mansion, July 7, 2 A M—The President continues easy. There is no change in his symptoms

The World's Sympathy

WASHINGTON July 6 Telegrams continue to be received by Secretary Blaine from sovereigns and representatives of Governments of the world expressive of their sympathy with with the President, and condemning the crime Germany, Russia, Sweden and Norway, Mexico and Belgium were among them from whom cablegrams were received to-day.

The Secretary of State had also received to-day resolutions of sympathy and condolence from the Common Council of the City of Norfolk Va Merchants Exchange of St Louis, the Baltimore Stock Exchange City Council of Wilkesbarre Pa County Court of Hamilton County, Tennessee at Chattanooga the Richland Volunteer Rifle Co, of Columbia S C the Town Council of Sumter S C Mayor and Councilmen of Newbern N C and the Chemical and Fertilizer Exchange of Baltimore. A LEAF FROM GUITAU'S HISTORY.

His Modest Request.

EXECUTIVE MANSION July 5 Since the attempted assassination of the President Mr Judd one of the latter's secretaries has recalled to mind the fact that upon which the President was at Mentor, Ohio, he received from the then unknown Charles Guiteau the following letter dated New York City, and written on note headed paper of the Fifth Avenue Hotel Dear General I Charles Guiteau, hereby make application for the Austrian Mission; being about to marry a wealthy and accomplished lady of this city we think that to gether we might represent this Nation with quality and grace On the principle of first come first served I have faith that you will favor this application your honorable consideration $1 T B CHAS GUITEAU

The letter was shown to Gen Garfield rather as a curiosity than as a communication to be answered, and he several times afterward referred to it half humorously as an illustration of unparalleled impudity and impudence

THE ALBANY CONTEST

STILL UNDECIDED.

The chair had a notice read announcing that in accordance with a call signed by 63 members the Republicans would meet in conference this evening to endeavor to agree upon candidates for U S Senators The convention then adjourned

THE FOURTH AT DETROIT The Fourth was appropriately celebrated at Detroit, in Belle Isle Grove, a most lovely retreat on the banks of the swift gliding Sebastacook The services were simple and heartfelt Rev W P Wardwell, of Newport delivered an oration There were none of the usual demonstrations of mirth and joy The people listened to the sober and patriotic words of the speaker with fearful interest The great theme of our national sorrow was upon every tongue and burdened every heart

AN UNPROFITABLE SEIZURE We learn that a constable while lounging about the Maine Central depot yesterday, observed movements which led him to suspect that an attempt was being made to smuggle liquor into outer quarters Keeping his weather eye open he saw a group of men roll out a beer keg, and they were about to put on a bigger when he swooped down upon them like a hawk upon a chicken Standing upon the head of the keg he claimed its possession in the name of the State. After some rather rough usage he was permitted to carry it away. Later investigation showed that the keg contained only water, and the zealous officer is half inclined to think that he has been the victim of a "put up job"

A WELL MERITED COMPLIMENT The general public who scan with such eager avidity every item of news bearing upon the attempted assassination of the President and his condition from day to day have but a limited idea of the amount of work done by those who daily it is to furnish them with this news. A PRAISEWORTHY ACT A few days since the attention of a benevolent gentleman was drawn toward a poor boy who was being made a subject of ridicule by a crowd of thoughtless urchins The boy was apparently about ten or eleven years old he and upon his feet a pair of No 10 boots a soldier's cap upon his head and a calico belt about his waist He looked like a member of the Forty Thieves On making inquiries the gentleman learned that the little fellow had recently arrived at this port, in company with his father, on fishing smacks, from Fortune Bay, Newfoundland, where the lad's mother died The father, evidently unable to provide properly for his motherless child, had brought him to this country, where it is to be hoped a kind Providence will raise him friends and a home The boy was a stranger to all, and was left to the tender mercies of the street gamins, who, as is their wont, were making sport of his misfortunes. Soon after the gentleman had left the scene, the boy was approached by a policeman, who, after learning the circumstances, kindly took the little fellow to a restaurant, where he was supplied with a good meal, and then conducted to the residence of the gentleman who had befriended him. The boy was provided with a bed, and will be cared for until such time as he can be placed in a position where he can earn his own living. This is but one of the many instances of kindness which are daily performed by our citizens, and which, though not blazoned abroad, are none the less worthy of praise.

THE GRAND HAND TOURNAMENT

Estimated that 20 000 People Were Present at Lake Maranocook—Fifty Bands United in One

From despatches received Tuesday night which were crowded out we learn that the monster band tournament held at Maranocook on the 4th inst was a grand success The tournament opened auspiciously everybody being in good spirits in consequence of despatches announcing an improvement in the President's condition The day was fine The crowd was estimated as being the largest ever assembled upon the grounds Heavily loaded trains, over nearly every road in Maine continued to arrive, swelling the gathering to fully 15 000 people Many made this an occasion to celebrate in consequence of postponement of celebrations on the Fourth One despatch states that the crowd constantly increased until it reached 20 000 strong, the entire grounds by noon being filled with a happy throng

It was the most magnificent of any musical event ever witnessed in Maine The contest opened at 1 30 the following bands appearing Millers of Lewiston West Waterville, North Berwick, Yarmouth, South Berwick Glover's of Auburn Winthrop Collins' of Portland, and Waldoboro After the contest followed a grand consolidation of fifty bands, comprising 1,100 musicians a feature surpassing anything attempted in the United States It was gigantic in the extreme and will never be forgotten by the thousands present Prizes were to be awarded for excellence in the following points time tune, tone, execution expression, deportment The judges were Prof W S Ripley, J B Clous and C W Thompson all eminent musicians They retired and rendered the following decision First prize Glover's second, Collins, third, Yarmouth, fourth West Waterville, fifth Millers, sixth Winthrop, seventh, North Berwick The playing was all excellent

TO OUR SUBSCRIBERS

Cause of the Delay in the Delivery of Yesterday's Edition

In these hours of suspense and anxiety consequent upon the President's critical condition the morning paper is of the first importance with the reading public The telegraphic columns are eagerly devoured and digested even before the morning meal is partaken of It was, therefore, a source of disappointment to our city subscribers that they did not receive the WHIG yesterday until a late hour in the forenoon An explanation is due to them for the tardiness in the delivery of our edition The delay was occasioned by the breaking of the press after a portion only of the edition had been worked We were then obliged to get up steam in the job office and work the remainder of the edition therein. While doing this, our pressman, Mr. Abram Boundy, had his hand badly jammed by the machinery, which caused a still further delay We trust that this explanation will be satisfactory to our city subscribers whom we try to serve with all possible promptness.

THE DOGS

An Unbearable Annoyance

Mr. Editor For some years past we have been much annoyed by dogs, and the annoyance is increasing. The number of licensed and unlicensed dogs at large is legion. They come upon our premises, pull up our roots and rose bushes, rush through our vines, tear up the soft earth in our terraces, commit nuisances on our lawns,—until our patience is nearly exhausted What shall we do? We dislike to use pistol or poison. Something must be done. Cows and pigs are kept by their owners in pitiful enclosures and are not allowed to run at large Why, then, should dogs be allowed to roam unrestrained? The habits of dogs are the most insidious of our domestic animals. Why should they be allowed the freedom of the city? Will not the owners of these animals please consider that we who do not keep dogs ought not to be asked to endure so much? It is not neighborly or kind to ask it We have suffered enough. Shall we send to the wise be sufficient?

DON'T LOSE THE BABY. Every mother knows how critical a time the second summer is, and how many little ones die during that period from Summer Complaint, Dysentery, Diarrhœa, and Cholera Morbus, and how anxiously she watches day by day, lest the dread disease snatch away the loved one! There is no disease that comes so suddenly, or is so frequently so deadly fatal, as these Bowel Complaints, and in a large majority of cases doctors and medicines seem to be of no avail There is, however, one remedy, which in forty years of trial has never been known to fail when taken according to the printed directions, and this is PERRY DAVIS' PAIN KILLER. It is so safe and sure that no mother is justified in being without it. A bottle in the house ready for sudden sickness will often save a life.
